HAS PROVEN

A Wonderful Success.

THE COMMITTEE

Appointed at the first Concert have decided to distribute the Prizes at the third and last Concert, which will take place at

IRVING HALL,

In New York City, on

Thursday, October 24th, 1867.

TICKETS ONE DOLLAR EACH.

A PRIZE WITH EVERY TICKET,

PROSPECTUS.

A number of the leading Bankers and Merchants of New York, in consideration of the great success which has attended many of the Charitable Presentation Entertainments of the day, have formed themselves into a company, with the view of inaugurating an enterprise which, while it shall return them a fair profit, shall offer greater advantages to ticket purchasers than any yet presented; and which being conducted upon perfectly legitimate and business basis, shall be free from those objectional features which have characterized many of these enterprises.

To this end they have consigned the sale of tickets and the registering of the same, to Clark, Webster & Co., Bankers and Managers, No. 62 Broadway, New York, who will keep the records in their custody until the day of the Grand Presentation Entertainment, when they will be handed over to a committee selected by the audience to make an impartial distribution of Presents.

A reference to the number of presents and the general plan of distribution, given below, will convince even the most sceptical of the great advantages which will accrue to all who participate in the enterprise: and the Commercial and Financial standing of the Company, and the Managers and Bankers thereof, will they hope, prove a sufficient guaranty of the fairness and impartiality with which everything in connection with it will be conducted, and that the interests of ticket holders will be most strictly watched over and guarded. In fact, it is the desire of the Managers to conduct every transaction for the mutual benefit of whoever shall purchase a ticket, and scrupulously to avoid any and everything which could in the slightest degree diminish the profits which are likely to accrue to all who invest.

The Wrecker's Daughter.

BY JENNY MICKELL.

Have you seen the fair maid of the Cottage,
The humble white cot, that stands by the shore,
Where dark crimson rosebuds sparkle with dew,
And o'ergrown with sweet briar the door.

Shell strewn is the path that leads to the well,
Where many a fond lover has sought her,
To catch but one glance of her bonny face,
As he draws her a bucket of water.

From rock to rock by the wild surging waves,
Peerless there in her beauty she wanders,
With face heavenly fair, and bright golden hair,
And footsteps as light as a fairy's.

With coquetish air she throws back the curls
From her brow, and her dreamy blue e'e
And smiles at the gale, as bronzed hands spread the sail,
To the wind, as she bounds o'er the sea.

With heart light as sea foam, she hums with the breeze,
Laughs at the tempest, cares nought for the storm,
Tuning her voice to the fisherman's chorus,
Sweetly sings her loved songs, all the day long.

Oft 'neath the soft sol of her boat she's rocking,
Resting her face on the bright dripping oar,
Watching the ray of sunbeams departing
Kissing the surf as it washes the shore.

Dix Island, Sept. 1867.

A REFLECTION.

[From Dr. Holland's poem, "Kathrina," just published by Charles Scribner & Co.]

O! not by bread alone is manhood nourished
To its supreme estate!
By every work of God have lived and flourished
The good man and the great.
Ay, not by bread alone!

"O! not by bread alone!" the sweet rose breathing
In throbs of perfume, speaks,
"But my rad hands, in earth and air, are wreathing
The blushes for my cheeks.
Ay, not by bread alone!"

"Oh! not by bread alone!" proclaims the thunder
The old oak from his crest:
"But suns and storms upon me, and deep under,
The rocks in which I rest.
Ay, not by bread alone!"

"Ah! not by bread alone!" The truth flies singing
In voices of the birds;
And from a thousand pastured hills is ringing
The answer of the herds:
"Ay, not by bread alone!"

Oh! not by bread alone! for life and being
Are finely complex all,
And increment, with element agreeing,
Must feed them or they fall,
Ay, not by bread alone!

Oh! not by love alone, though strongest, purest,
That ever swayed the heart:
For strongest passion evermore the surest
Defrauds each manly part.
Ay, not by love alone!

Oh! not by love alone is power engendered;
Until within the soul
The gift of every motive has been rendered,
It is not strong and whole.
Ay, not by love alone!

Oh! not by love is manhood nourished
To its supreme estate;
By every word of God have lived and flourished
The good men and the great.
Ay, not by love alone!

Miscellany.

GEN. LAMORCIERE AND RACHEL.

I was on my wedding trip, with my wife and sister, and like many another Yankee, had gone to Paris, unable to speak a word of the language. However, we got along tolerably well, for a relative of ours, was there attending the medical lectures, piloted us about and acted as our interpreter. After ten days, I was suddenly called to London; and as my companions had not seen half enough of Paris, it was decided that they should remain behind with our relative, and join me afterward under his escort at Liverpool. They were to take one of the small Cunard steamers which then ran from Havre, and I was to go to London, via that place, and to leave my passport there at Wheeler's hotel; for without it the ladies could not leave the country.

Things being thus arranged, the doctor one morning called a cabman, and directed him to drive me to the Havre station. The cars were announced to start at eleven o'clock, and my appointment required my presence in London at four of the following afternoon. So, you can conceive of my consternation, when, on arriving at the station not five minutes before the advertised time, it occurred to me that the cabman had driven me to the wrong depot. In our going about Paris Havre station had been pointed out to me: but that I was sure was not the same building.—I tried in vain to make the cabman understand me, and at last, with my carpet-bag in my hand, I rushed into the depot. A train of cars was steamed up, ready for starting; but nothing about them indicated where they were going, and not a soul in sight looked as if he could speak English—Frenchmen, you know, seldom can: they abominate the language and the people. In my dilemma my eye fell on a gentleman buying a paper at a news-stand, whose face seemed strangely familiar. He was a tall, finely proportioned, magnificent looking man not far from forty, and would have arrested attention any where; but where I had seen him I could not recall for the life of me. However, it had not been in France, for I had been there only ten days; and it must have been in some region where English was spoken. So, without any ceremony I accosted him.

'Sir, will you tell me if this is the Havre station?'

'It is sir,' he answered, with a slight French accent, 'and the train leaves immediately. If you would take it, buy your ticket, I will show you the right carriage.'

'There was not a moment to lose; but the ticket-vender had nimble fingers, and when the bell ceased tolling I was quietly seated by the side of the gentleman in one of the three compartments into which French cars are divided, and on the way to Havre.

We were the only occupants of the division, but for a while we rode along in silence. At last my new acquaintance turned to me and said, rather abruptly, 'You are an American sir?'

'I am, sir.' I answered, smilingly; 'but how did you know that? How, at first sight, can you distinguish a Yankee from an Englishman?'

'It would be difficult to tell; yet there is a difference—as great as between a Frenchman and a German. You are a great people, sir—the freest on the globe.'

'We think so, sir; but we hope the French will one day be as free.'

'We hope so; but I fear the day is distant, our republic is but little better than a despotism.'

'So I hear; and from what I learn in Paris I conclude you are on a volcano at this moment. I am told that an outbreak may occur at almost any hour.'

'It may; there is trouble in the wind; but let them look at it, the people will triumph.'

This last remark, as it came hissing through his closed teeth, indicated intense feeling. In a moment, as if to change the subject, he added, 'some years ago I met one of your great men—Mr. Webster.'

'Oh yes! he was in Paris. I have his autograph in my pocket.'

'Be kind enough to let me see it.' I drew out my passport, to which Mr. Webster's signature—he being then Secretary of State—was attached.—The Frenchman looked at it curiously, and then handed it back, saying—

'If you could get out of France without it I should beg this from you. Mr. Webster is the greatest of men.'

A desultory conversation followed, during which he showed a thorough knowledge of the condition and resources of this country, and then he said.

'How long have you been in Paris?

'Only ten days; but I have been going night and day. 'I think I have seen about all there is to be seen.'

'But you could not do so in that time; nor in ten months. You have only had a glimpse of the out side of things.—Where have you been?'

'Everywhere, to the Tuileries, the Palais Royal, the Louvre, the Invalides, Notre Dame, St. Cloud and Versailles—and what a place that is. I spent the most of three days in that palace, and would have been glad to stay there three months.'

'Yes, the galleries are fine; but you found the old masters at the Louvre.—Were you no better pleased with them?

'No; to my eye paint is none the better for being old. I saw nothing there that I thought equal to those battle-pieces by Horace Vernet. He makes the canvas talk. Looking at some of them, I could almost hear the cannon and smell the gun-powder.'

'I was then younger than I am now, and time has corrected my judgment.

Smilling at my enthusiasm, he said, 'they are fine. The figures are portraits and scenes true to life. I know, for I was in the Algerian war.'

'I was told they were,' I answered, and that gave me greater interest in the paintings. That 'battle of Isly' is a magnificent work; but some of the smaller pieces are wonderful. I remember one, in particular, which seemed actually alive. I can't recall its name; but it represents the siege of an Algerian tower. The French have made a breach in the wall and are advancing to the assault with fixed bayonets, while the Arabs from behind the broken wall are pouring upon them a sheet of red flame. Bousset, Cavignac, and Changarnier are down in the ranks; but Lamoriciere, who is leading the attact, has clambered up the breach, and, with his back to the Arabs and his face to the French, is waving on his men with his sword, as if unconscious of the fearful hailstorm that is falling around him. If that is a portrait and that scene was real, he is a most magnificent specimen of manly beauty. I would walk fifty miles and pay fifty francs simply to look at him.'

'The figure is a portrait, and the scene was real,' he answered; but you paint Lamoriciere in even stronger colors than Vernet; yet I rather like the fellow.'

'You know him then?'

'Know him? Oh yes! we went through the war together.'

'He must be a splended fighter; but I hear that he has no brains. It's a pity; for he has a good face, one that shows some soul, if not much intellect.'

At this my companion, who had repeatedly smiled, laughed outright. At a loss for the reason of his mirth, I added, somewhat nettled, 'I presume I have said something that sounds ridiculous; but upon my word, I don't know what it is.'

'Oh, it is nothing! I was only amused at your being willing to pay fifty Francs to see a French general, who just now is nobody.'

'But that's his own fault; for he's the idol of the army and the people.—If he had any brains, he would send Louis Nap, spinning at the next election; but he hasn't. He's been trying to sit upon two stools, truckling to both the Orleanists and the Republicans, and between the two he has fallen to the ground.'

'You don't know that,' he answered gravely; 'You Americans get your knowledge of French politics from the English newspapers, and they all misrepresent us systematically.'

'That may be, but I didn't get my knowledge of Lamoriciere from them. I learned what little I know of him from intelligent Americans, long resident in Paris, whom I met at the table d hote of the English hotel which joins the Luxembourg. But pardon, me the subject is unpleasent to you.'

This I said, because something in his face indicated a momentary pain; but he answered, smilingly, 'oh no, not a all. On the contrary, I like to hear what you Americans think of—the General.'

However I volunteered no 'further remarks on the subject, and soon the subject ran into another channel. Not long afterward we arrived at Rouen, where the train halted for refreshments. When the guard opened the door my companion said to me—

'As you don't speak French, you had better sit with me. Otherwise you may be imposed upon.'

He stepped out on the platform and I followed a few paces behind. Two gentlemen, apparently travelling, were standing abreast of the door as we got out; and when my companion had gone on a rod or two, one of them said to the other in English:

'That is he.'

I turned instantly and asked in a low tone:

'Who is he, sir?'

'Gen. Lamoriciere!'

I never stole a sheep. I never was caught in any act of petty larceny; consequently I do not know how a person may feel under such disagreeable circumstances; but if he should be any more thoroughly ashamed of himself than I then was, he would need no severer punishment. I turned and re-entered the car; but in a moment plucked up courage and went into the resturant. The General had reserved a chair for me, and as I sat down beside him he said, I thought a little wickedly, 'I concluded you were not coming.'

I made a commonplace reply, and no more was said during the hasty meal.

When we returned to the car he began to talk volubly about Corneille and Fontenelle, who were born at Rouen, and about the wonderful drama of which that place was the scene in the time of the maid of Orleans; but I sat stock still, saying never a word. Finally the situation became unendurable, and I blurted out:

'Pardon me General, but I can't let you say another word until I have apologized for the very free way in which I have spoken of you. I assure you that'—

He laid his hand familiarly on my knee, and said in a most affable manner—

'Don't assure me of any thing. I know it all. You found me out at Rouen. I am charmed with your frankness. We shall be the best of friends; for, do you know, I think you were more than half right; I believe I AM a fool.

With this he fell into a boisterous fit of laughter, which lasted for many minutes. I caught the infection, and laughed immoderately at the ridiculous figure I presented to my own imagination. At last he said—

'Say no more about it; we are the best of friends, I only wish we were going the other way. If I had you in Paris I'd make you stay with me a month.'

The next two hours were among the most agreeable ever passed. He fought his battles over again, took town after town in Algiers: recaptared Abd-el-Kader, breasted again the terrible storm which swept away the throne of Louis Phillippe: and at last spoke sadly and yet hopefully of the future of France which he said, was already feeling the first tremble of an earthquake, that might, if the people were not true to themselves, engulf its liberties for a century. At last the train ran into the station at Havre, and he said to me:

'The Southampton steamer does not leave till the morning. Where do you intend to stay over night?'

'At the English hotel. (Wheeler's.) I have arranged to leave my passports there for my wife and sister.'

'Never mind the passport,' said he. I'll attend to that. Go with me, I want to avoid notice, and well have a cosy evening together.'

We drove to the French hotel, and were given a parlor, into which opened a couple of bedrooms. Here our dinner was quietly served, the landlord being cautioned by the General not to let his presence be known. When the meal had been some time over, however, he entered the room announcing several visitors—gentlemen who heard of Lamoriciere's arrival, and had called to pay their respects, The General declined to receive them, expressing a desire to be quiet, and asked the landlord what was going on at the theatre. Rachel was to play in 'Adrienne Leconvreur.' Then said the General, 'get us a private box; that will rid me of these people.'

We were driven to the theatre in a close carriage, and entered the box where the curtains were down. As we took seats close to the railing, Lamoricere said to me, 'Now we are safe for three hours at least. We can see very well without lifting the curtains.

The house was packed from parquet to ceiling with an intelligent and fashionable audience, and all went on quietly and orderly until the middle of the second act, when Adrienne comes upon the stage studing her part. Our box was so situated that we could not see her entrance, and instinctively, the general thrust the curtains aside for a good view of the wonderful actress. He witidrew his face in a moment; but in that moment a gentleman below us in the parquet caught sight of him, and springing to his feet and whirling his hat around his head he shouted, 'Vive! Vive! General Lamoriciere! Instantly every soul in the house was on his feet; and then, amid the swinging of hats, the whirling of canes, and the waving of handkerchiefs, there went up a storm of vives that shook the great building to its foundation.

The play stopped, and Rachel, seizing a flag advanced to the footlights: and Lamoriciere, thrusting aside the curtains of the box, stood facing the multitude bowing and blushing like a young maiden until the cheering had subsided.—Then Rachel—not now the great French actress, but the great French woman—waving the tri-color above her head, began the Marseillaise, and all that vast multitude of over three thousand took up the mighty song till one great wave of melody thrilled through the immense house with a vibration like that of an earthquake. Her eyes blazing, her whole soul on fire, the woman appeared the very incarnation of the spirit of the great song; and the man, his face aglow, his splendid frame dilated and quivering from head to foot, seemed to have all France in his veins. Then I knew where I had met him before; for, as he stood there, pouring fourth those mighty words, he was the very man whom Vernet had painted on the ramparts of that Algerian town. I no longer wondered that he was the idol of the French army and people.

It came to an end at last, and then, dropping the curtain, Lamoriciere said to me, 'I would not abridge your pleasure, but I must go. Seizing his hat he ran through the narrow passage which led to the outer entrance, and I followed. It was not two minutes before we were in the carriage and being driven rapidly toward the hotel. He was silent for a time: then he turned to me and said, 'Do you think now I have been trying to sit upon two stools?'

'Oh, no! I have not thought so for hours.'

'These people love me,' he added, because I love France. For no other reason.

Such another scene as the one which followed I never witnessed. Till long after midnight the great drawing room of the hotel was a running stream of men, women and children, who kissed him, caressed him, and held him in their arms, as only French People can do such things, while he, smiling and blushing and crying by turns, met their endearments with all the warmth of a schoolboy.

When we parted to go to our beds I said to him, 'I never envied any man till to-night. To-night I have thought I would like to be Lamoriciere.'

'Then you'd be a sorry fellow,' he answered, laughing. But the people love me, and for that I am to be envied. I would rather have their love than rule France.'

The next morning he drove me to the steamer and took my passport to Wheeler's. A fortnight later, my wife joined me at Liverpool, I sent the passport to his address at Paris, and a short time afterward received a note from him, acknowledging its receipt, and inviting me to visit him at Paris. Three days after the date of the note—on the morning of the second of December—he was seized in his bed, by the soldiers of Louis Napoleon, and driven to the fortress of Ham. A little later he was sent into Belgium, and never afterward set foot in France.—Northern Light.

SIX LOVE LETTERS.

'Are there any more of these letters?' When her father asked this question in an awful tone, Lucilla Richmond could not say 'No,' and dared not say 'Yes,' but as an intermediate course burst into tears, and sobbed behind her handkerchief.

'Bring them to me, Lucilla, said her father, as if she had answered him, as indeed, she had; and the girl, trembling and weeping, arose to obey him.

Then Mrs. Richmond, her daughter's very self grown older, came behind her husband's chair and patted him on the shoulder.

'Please don't be hard with her, my dear,' she said, coaxingly. 'He's a nice young man, and it is our fault after all as much as hers, and you won't break her young heart I'm sure.'

'Perhaps you approve of the whole affair, ma'ma,' said Mr. Richmond.

'I—no—that is I only'—gasped the little woman; and hearing Lucilla coming, she sank into a chair, blaming herself dreadfully for not having been present at all her daughter's music lessons during the past year.

For all the disturbance arose from a music teacher who had given lessons to Miss Lucilla for twelve months, and who had taken the liberty to fall in love with her, knowing well that she was the daughter of one of the richest men in Yorkshire.

'It was inexcusable in a poor music teacher, who should have known his place,' Mr. Richmond declared, and he clutched the little perfumed billet which had fallen into his hands as he might a scorpion, and waited for the others with a look upon his face which told of no softening. They came at last, six little envelopes tied together with blue ribbon, and were laid at his elbow by his desparing daughter.

'Lock these up until I return home this evening,' he said to his wife; 'I will read them then. Meanwhile Lucilla is not to see the music master on any pretence.'

And then Miss Lucilla went down upon her knees:

'Oh, dear papa,' she cried, 'dearest papa, please don't say I must never see him again. I couldn't bear it. Indeed I could not. He's poor, I know, but he's a gentleman, and I—I like him so much, papa.'

'No more of this absurdity, my dear,' said Mr. Richmond, 'he has been artful enough to make you think him perfection, I suppose. Your parents know what is best for your happiness. A music teacher is not a match for Miss Richmond.'

With which remark Mr. Richmond put on his hat and overcoat, and departed.

Then Lucilla and her mother took the opportunity of falling into each others's arms.

'It's so naughty of you,' said Mrs. Richmond. 'But oh, dear, I can't blame you. It was exactly so with me. I ran away with your papa, you know, and my parents objected because of his poverty. I feel the greatest sympathy for you, and Frederick has such fine eyes, and is so pleasing. I wish I could soften your papa.'

'When he has seen the letters there'll be no hope, I'm very much afraid,' sobbed Miss Lucilla. 'Fred is so romantic, and papa hates romance.'

'He used to be very romantic himself in those old times,' said Mrs. Richmond. 'Such letters as he wrote me. I have them in my desk yet, He said he should die if I refused him.'

'So does Fred,' said Lucilla.

'And that life would be worthless without me; and about my being beautiful, (he thought so, you know.) I'm sure he ought to sympathize a little,' said Mrs. Richmond.

But she dare not promise that he would.

She coaxed her darling to stop crying, and made her lie down; then went up into her own room to put the letters into her desk; and, as she placed them into one pigeon-hole, she saw in another a bundle, tied exactly as those were, and drew them out.

Those letters were to a Lucilla also. One who had received them twenty years before—and she was now a matron old enough to have a daughter who had heart-troubles—unfolding them one by one, wondering how it came to pass that lovers were all so much alike.

Half a dozen—just the same number, and much more romantic than those the music master had written to her daughter Lucilla. A strange idea came into Mrs. Richmond's mind. She dared not oppose her husband; by a look or a word she never attempted such a thing.

But she was very fond of her daughter. When she left the desk she looked guilty and frightened, and something in her pocket rustled as she moved. But she said nothing to any one on the subject until the dinner hour arrived, and with it came her husband, more angry and determined than ever. The meal was passed in silence; then having adjourned to the parlor, Mr. Richmond seated himself in a great arm-chair and demanded:

'The letters,' in a voice of thunder.

Mrs. Richmond put her hand into her pocket and pulled it out again with a frightened look.

'Those absurd letters, if you please, my dear.'

And then the little woman faltered.

'I—that is—I believe—yes dear, I believe I have them,' and gave him a pile of white envelopes, encircled with a blue ribbon, with a hand that trembled like an aspen leaf.

As for Lucilla, she began to weep as though the end of all things had come at last, and felt sure that if papa should prove cruel she should die.

'Six letters—six shameful pieces of deception, Lucilla,' said the indignant parent. 'I am shocked that a child of mine should practice such duplicity. Hem! let us see. Number one I believe. June, and this is December. Half a year you have deceived us then, Lucillia. Let me see—ah! 'From the first moment he adored you,' eh? Nonsense. People don't fall in love it that absurd manner. It takes years of acquaintance and respects and attachment. 'With your smiles for his goal, he would win both fame and fortune, poor as he is!' Fiddlesticks, Lucilla. A man who had common sense would always wait until he had a fair commencement before he proposed to any girl. 'Praise of your beauty,—the the loveliest creature he ever saw.' Exaggeartion, my dear. You are not plain, but such flattery is absurd. 'Must hear from you or die!' Dear, dear, how absurd!'

And Mr. Richmond dropped the letter, and took up another.

'The same stuff,' he commented. 'I hope you don't believe a word he says. A plain, earnest, upright sort of a man would never go into such rhapsodies. I am sure. Ah! now, in number three he calls you 'an angel!' He is romantic upon my word. And what is all this?'

'Those who would forbid me to see you can find no fault with me but my poverty. I am honest—I am earnest in my efforts. I am by birth a gentleman, and love you from my soul. Do not let them sell you for gold, Lucilla.'

'Great heavens, what impertinence to your parents!'

'I don't remember Fred's saying anything of that kind,' said poor Lucilla. 'He never knew you would object.'

Mr. Richmond shook his head, frowned, and read on in silence until the last sheet lay under his hand. Then, with an ejaculation of rage he started to his feet.

'Infamous!' he cried: 'I'll go to him this instant—I'll horsewhip him!—I'll murder him! As for you by Jove, I'll send you to a convent. Elope, elope with a music teacher! I'm ashamed to call you my daughter. Where's my hat? Give me my boots. Here John, call a cab! I——'

But here Lucilla caught one arm and Mrs. Richmond the other.

'Oh, papa, are you crazy? Frederick never proposed such a thing. Let me see the letter. Oh, papa, this is not Fred's—upon my word it is not. Do look papa: it is dated twenty years back, and Frederick's name is not Charles! Papa, these are your love bleak, wave-lashed coast of Milo under our lee. The captain was sober now, and I saw a shudder pass through his frame as he stood and gazed upon the grim rocks in the distance.

At the breakfast table he said not a word. He could not eat and he seemed sick and faint. Towards noon he came on deck and called all his crew aft.

'My men,' he said in a firm, feeling tone, 'I have deeply wronged you all, and my officers more deeply still. But let the past be forgiven me. I ask you not to forget it, for in the memory of the terrible fate I came so near bringing upon you, shall my own safety be fixed. But forgive me, and as God is my maker you shall never have occasion to blame me again.'

The glad shout which went up from the deck assured Capt Withers that he had not lost a friend. They loved him better than ever from that day, and he never betrayed the new confidence they reposed in him. He cast the accursed enemy from him, and never touched it more, for he knew too well that his fate depended in an entire shutting out of the thief which had so often stolen the best part of him.

The Caucus System.

It may be questioned whether in this republican country elections are really made by the people—that is by an expression of the actual choice of a majority of the legal voters. We have the form of such a choice, but do we have the substance? Is the office of the people at the polls that of election, or only that of confirmation? Are elections made at the polls, or in the caucus room? and are nominations made in the caucus room, or by a few citizens or politicans (honest or otherwise, as it may happen) even before the caucus is held? Is "King Caucus" the intelligent and faithful servant of the people, or is he their master?

The caucus system often fails to answer its only legitimate end—that of ascertaining the actual preference of the people in the selection of candidates for office and it may often be made an instrument of great abuse of the people's rights. When it fails or is perverted, in this way, the fault may rest with the people themselves, or it may lie with scheming wire-pullers and demagogues, who bend the people to their own selfish purposes. A caucus is called to select delegates to a convention, or nominate a candidate for the legislature. Perhaps only a very small proportion of voters are present. These make the nominations, which may be good or bad, and in either case (unless they be very bad) the mass of the party sustain them, or their action, as a matter of course. Now, a handful of men may control the nominations of a caucus in this way, either in perfect honesty and good faith, or as a means of effecting selfish ends of their own. Again, a caucus may be very largely attended, but its action may rest with a very few men, who have agreed upon a "ticket" and bring in their prepared ballots, which are usually cast by the mass of the meeting, with little question.

Now is this system right or wrong? On the one hand it may be said that the performance of all such public duties usually fall upon a few, who take sufficient interest to see them performed. All the voters in a town will not interest themselves to enquire men's special views and ascertain who will make the best delegates to a convention or representatives in the legislature—who will act most honestly and consistently, and be influenced least by clique purposes and selfish interests; so it devolves upon a comparatively few to do this duty. Such a few may do it honestly, with good motives and to the best of their ability. All the voters of the party are invited to the performance of these duties, but in the nature of things the burden is left to a few, who must discharge the duty which is to be done, and leave it to the ratification of the masses. On the other hand it may be said the caucus system opens the door for dishonesty and corruption, and affords a means for wire-pullers and political schemers to lead the people and procure their confirmation of corrupt action. As now managed it enables a few men to control the action of the people, and to command their support for men who are not really their choice. It enables a few men to select their candidates and force them upon the people as the choice of the mass.

The caucus system as managed, certainly has grave defects and is subject to great abuses. But what is the remedy? Nominations must be made, and somebody must make them. The effectual remedy would be for the whole people to look closely after the public interests, attend the primary meetings, see that full freedom of choice were enjoyed and allow no clique to dictate their action. The dangers and evils of the system might be, in some measure, at least, avoided, by securing greater publicity of action. If, for instance, usage should require the names of all persons to be presented for the suffrages of a caucus, to be announced in the press, or posted on a convenient bulletin board, some time in advance of the meeting, it would afford better opportunity for a real expression of the wishes of the people, and for a canvass of the merits of prospective candidates. Perhaps no remedy for present defects of the caucus system can be suggested that would not also be subject to abuses, but those who seek to preserve the integrity of our political system and to advance the public good, should endeavor to prevent the abuses of the caucus system and to so manage it as to remove it from the control of all small cliques and party schemers and make it the honest servant of the whole people.

The people have always a final remedy against the abuses of the caucus, and that is to repudiate its dictation at the polls. This great power of the people to overthrow, by the ballot, any political abuse, great or small, is the safe-guard of our system. If the people are wrongly led they have always the power to repudiate such leadership, and this imposes a safe check on what otherwise might be fatal political abuses. To this power King Caucus is subject, and it is well that he should be compelled to bow to it, at times. To the abuse of the caucus system—to the making of a bad nomination, was due the defeat of the Union party in California, and similar causes it is said operated in Ohio. In remarking upon these things, the Boston Advertiser speaks as follows upon the caucus system:

"The septre of King Caucus seems to be slipping from his grasp, and we doubt if many mourners will be found among that class of the people who desire good government. The evidences of this decline of his power are all about us. In Ohio, we are told, the bolting of bad nominations, of which there were many, gave the legislature to the opposition, and though in case the result involved the loss of a Sanator in Congress, the ultimate effect will be good, if only it teaches the party to be more careful in its choice of candidates, or causes the substitution of some better method of selecting them. The bolt in California, or rather the audacity of the general convention in proposing a bad candidate, lost the State for the republicans. And the republicans papers of New York now publicly and earnestly urge the people to repudiate several corrupt candidates for the legislature.

But it is unnecessary to multiply instances of the fact that the authority of the caucus is gradually diminishing. It seems to be a growing opinion that American freemen are not to be controlled by that small minority of the people which attends and shapes the action of party meetings. If the suffrage amendment must needs be defeated in Ohio we should rejoice to attribute its defeat to a cause which indicates so healthy a movement of opinion, although of course a vote against it for this reason was illogical, bad in policy and wrong in principle."

THE RAILROAD.—A despatch received here last Saturday evening, stated that the surveying party of the Knox and Lincoln Railroad, accompanied by Mr. Moses, the President, had then carried their preliminary survey as far as the head of the old Canal, in Nobleboro', making the distance 20 1-2 miles from Bath. We are informed that four miles would be sufficient allowance from that point to Waldoboro' River, and the distance to this city would then not exceed 17 miles. This would make the whole length of the road only 41 miles, which is within all the ordinary calculations of the distance that have been mentioned in estimating its probable cost. This looks very favorable for the enterprise.

MASONIC.—Quite a large delegation of the Masonic Fraternity of this city returned last Sabbath evening from Carver's Harbor, Vinalhaven, where they had been to pay the last sad duties of the Brotherhood to a deceased brother, Capt. Benjamin Roberts, of Vinalhaven. He was taken sick with typhoid fever while away from home; was brought, on board his vessel, into port, carried to the residence of his son, and, unable to be removed to his own home, was cared for and watched over by his family and the resident members of the Fraternity, until the 18th inst., when he closed his eyes on earth's scenes and passed into the unseen world. He was a man highly esteemed by all who knew him, for his kindness, characteristic and upright deportment. He leaves a widow and four children to mourn the loss of a kind husband and an indulgent father; and, also, aged parents and affectionate brothers and sisters, to deplore the sad breach made in their domestic circle. His age was about 45 years.

As he was a member of Timothy Chase Lodge of Belfast, the painful duty devolved on Aurora and Rockland Lodges, with other brethren, to commit his remains to the grave with masonic ceremonies and honors. The resident masons of Vinalhaven evinced a commendable spirit of sympathy and aid toward the afflicted family throughout his sickness, and in the solemnities of his burial.

An appropriate sermon was preached on the occasion, by Rev. J. R. Bowler, of this city, and the masonic ceremonies of burial were impressively performed by Right Worshipful E. E. Wortman, District Deputy Grand Master of this Masonic District.

SEVERE ACCIDENT.—Our community have been painfully excited at the severe accident which occurred to Stephen A. Laughton, a lad of about 17 years, son of Sheriff S. W. Laughton of this city, an account of which, with attendant circumstances, we give as we find them in the Free Press of yesterday:

"On Friday last, 18th inst., Stepnen A., son of Stephen W. Laughton, a lad of 17 years, left home about half-past eleven o'clock in the forenoon, with his rifle, alone, and went to Lindsey Grove, on the south side of Middle street, perhaps a half a mile from home. When there, about noon, as he says, and as is supposed, he discharged his gun at some object, and the discharge blew out the breech-pin, which struck him near the left temple, crushing the skull and removing it from the brain over a space about an inch-and-a-half long by three-fourths of an inch wide. Nothing was known of him or the accident till about 5 o'clock, when he returned home, alone, his head bandaged by his handkerchief, covered with blood, and nearly blind. He had with him his shattered gun-stock, the barrel, and the breech-pin, the latter of which he says he took from the wound in his head. He says he went to sleep—(it is probable he was insensible from his injuries,) that when he awoke he took the breech-pin from the wound, bound his handkerchief around his head, and tried to rise, but was sick, and could not; that he went to sleep again, and when he awoke, he wiped the blood from his eyes so that he could see a little, picked up the fragments of his gun, and started for home, reaching it as above stated, about 5 o'clock in the afternoon. The next day he was traced on his way, and the place was found where he lay down, also a tree by which he had supported himself. It is a wonder that he should have been able to get home at all. He has lost but a very small portion of his brain. He has been in possession of his senses most of the time, rests well, with little pain, and some hope is entertained that he may recover.

Mr. Laughton had just lost his eldest daughter, a young lady, and this affliction falls with the more severity, therefore. We hope his son may recover."

READING OF GREETING.—The following greeting from the President of the Knox and Lincoln Association was read and received with applause:

THOMASTON, Oct, 9. 1867.

To E. F. Duren, Secretary of the P. M. A:

Herewith find a copy of our circular of the next meeting of the Association. A sprout from a seed of the thistle-down floated off from the Penobscot stalk, having attained but a three years growth. Rooting however, it is, and promises to be vigorous and perennial.

Your session the current week we trust will prove as successful as its stars are brilliant.

Accept our most cordial greetings for the Association, and allow us to express the confidence that in the future not very remote, we shall be able to prepare a Festival to which we shall dare to invite the most charitable of our Penobscot friends. Meanwhile accept assurance of our high and abiding regard.

J. K. MASON.

On motion of J. K. Holt, of Hampden,

Voted, That the President send a suitable response to the communication from Mr. Mason.

The following is the response of the President of the Penobscot Musical Association:

BANGOR, Oct. 11, 1867.

See'y of the Knox and Lincoln Musical Association:—The welcome greeting trilling upon our ears, in the delicate tones of your President, we gladly echo back on the wave of our full Oratorio and highest Jubilee Song.

Very heartily appreciating the honor of being recognized in a sort of paternal relation to you, we hope that ours is a feeling akin to that of the apostle who had no greater joy than to hear that his children were walking in the truth.

To your own undue modesty we must attribute the somewhat doubtful compliment of acknowledging the receipt from us, as the germ of your life, of a seed from floating "thistle down;" for, instead of a harvest of thistles, we shall be disappointed if Knox and Lincoln counties do not soon bloom with the choicest flowers of all the musical conservatory, as the fruit of your culture, especially since with such commendable judgment you have chosen the leadership of a true "Master Mason," whose long and gratefully remembered service in Penobscot is, we hope, a sufficient guarantee of his thorough acquaintance with the craft.

We wish you to know that your congratulations reach us on our Musical Thanksgiving week, when, of course, the Muses are all at home, and the old homestead is echoing with the happiest notes of a glorious family gathering; when, if any charge the fathers and mothers with being a little old, they are right certain of having seen the day when they were as young as anybody.

Rejoicing in your prosperity and in the excellent arrangements for your approaching festival if anything can add an item to its joy, let it be that, to you, and through you to New Hampshire, from us, and through us from Massachusetts, and from the land of Luther and Mendelssohn, there go this year the hearty return of tuneful greetings, in the hope that our mutual efforts may be most harmoniously continued, with the assistance of the best artists from neighboring States and foreign lands, till all the counties in our commonwealth shall echo to each other, in highest, sweetest notes of concord, and our sons and daughters be—in the best sense—children of song.

A. K. P. SMALL, President.

After reading of which it was voted, to publish and place it on the record.

The President introduced Mr. E. F. Duren of Bangor, Sec. of P. M. A. Who gave the result of his experience in connection with Musical Associations. Adjourned to evening.

WEDNESDAY EVENING.

General Rehersals of Church music. Glees and Choruses. Song by Miss Faunce, "Tell out art so near;" being recalled she sang "Let us all speak our minds if we die for it." Song by Mr. Mortland, "My Queenly Island Home."

THURSDAY MORNING.

This session was devoted to the rehersal of Hymn Tunes, Chants and Anthems, and suggestions to leaders of Choirs and teachers of Singing Schools by the Conductor. Adjourned to 2 o'clock.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

In the providence of him who notes the falling of the Sparrow, and the particularity of whose care for us is represented by the several hairs of our head, death has been allowed to invade our musical family and removed four of our number to another, and we fondly trust to a land of more perfect service and blissful harmonies.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON RESOLUTIONS.

Thankful to our Infinite and Common Father, under whose protection we have dwelt secure another year, that He has given us this favorable opportunity for interchange of mutual greetings, and acquiring knowledge and skill in the science and practice of vocal music, we would not fail to record our devout recognition of his merciful loving kindness.

Music we regard, not merely a sentiment, nor only a science, but as the finest of the arts: and also, as the most expressive of Language: and to-day and here, do we renew our pledge to cultivate it personally, and do what we can to interest and bless our several communities with its everlasting and inspiring harmonies.

As expressive further of our sentiments,

Resolved, That we tender our warmest gratitude to Prof. C. M. Wyman, for his untiring devotion to our musical welfare during these days of our Festival. For his excellent hints: his high-toned principles as inculcated in remarks on the music of the sanctuary; and the charming examples of culture and true musical inspiration he has given us.

Resolved, That we account ourselves especially favored in having the accomplished and delightful services of Miss A. M. Faunce of Boston. The admirable manner in which she has executed her part in our festival, merits, and has our heartiest approbation. Our thanks, though not the most material offering, we acknowledge are due, and we delight most promptly to pay.

Resolved, That to Miss Davis of Belfast, Messrs. Duren and Hoyt of Bangor, and Sibly of Winterport, and also, to all the ladies and gentlemen, members of the Association, who have responded to the call of the president and committee in making up the entertainments of the matinees and concerts we most joyfully extend our thanks.

Resolved, That we feel indebted to Mrs. E. E. Wight of this city, our skillful pianist, and wish thus publicly to assure her of the appreciation of her efforts, to make our present convention a marked success.

Resolved, That Albert Smith, Esq. of this city, for the use of his elegant Piano, is entitled to, and has the assurance of our sincere gratitude.

Resolved, That we recognize special indebtedness to Messrs. Smith, Harrington, Andrews, and other gentlemen, committee of arrangements in this city, for their manifold attentions to the wants and comfort of us all. Also that we will put on public record our sense of high obligation to the Lodge of Good Templars for granting us the use of this Hall.

Resolved, That to the good people of Rockland, who have opened their doors and received us to their generous hospitality, we feel ourselves under obligations we cannot well express. We assure them of our heartfelt thanks; and, as we go to our homes shall carry with us the pleasant impression that the happiness and success of our now closing session has been greatly enhanced by their urbane and lavish kindness.

Resolved, That to the Hon. Mayor, for his presence and cordial greeting, we express our sense of high consideration. To the Secretary of the Penobscot, and to the President of the Waldo Musical Associations, for their presence and words of good cheer, we give assurance of welcome and sympathy in their efforts to promote the culture of music.

Resolved, That at the close of this concert we adjourn to meet at Waldoboro', to hold our next annual session.

After reading the above, Rev. W. O. Holman presented the following, which was adopted:

Resolved, That we return to Rev. J. K. Mason of Thomaston, our worthy President, our sincere thanks for his deep interest in us as an Association, his admirable counsels, kindly words and invaluable services, and assure him that we heartily appreciate them and hope that his life may long be spared to him and to us.

ALBERT SMITH, Secretary.

Letter from Kansas.

JUNCTION CITY, KANSAS, OCT. 9, 1867.

MR. EDITOR:—Thanking you for the Gazette, which I have received regularly, I now, after so long a delay, hasten to fulfil the promise made at the date of removal to this new, enterprising, Western State.

Kansas—what shall I say of her? Her climate is salubrious. No cold "North Easters;" no fog mulls; no drizzling, dull, heavy, damp days; but a very decided climate. When it rains, it comes down suddenly, thick and fast, for a few hours at most; and then it is decidedly pleasant for days to come; when the wind blows, it blows hard, and stops as though it had got through with a very unpleasant job and was glad. I have not seen what I call a storm since I came here. This eve is very pleasant, mild and warm, with our door open and with summer clothing on we are comfortable. We had one or two chilly nights and that only reminded us of fall. I fancy Maine people in flannels hovering around the stove. The soil of Kansas is all it is represented to be. As regarde Junction, I am compelled to say it is smart. It has 2500 inhabitants, three meeting houses nearly completed, others in contemplation, six worshiping religious services, a fine stone school house, many fine stone and wooden residences, and also some fine blocks; and almost every day another is added to its numbers, houses spring up like mushroom in a night. Everything intended for sale, can be bought here at price but little in advance of New England, and if we only had a plenty of farmers around us, we could live cheaper here than in Maine. As it is the demand is greater than the supply. The city has outgrown the country. Farming is a grand paying business and probably will be for the next ten years at least. The soil is so rich that it produces double the quantity with less than one quarter of the labor required in Maine. They lightly plow the surface, cast in the seed, and do no more till harvesting. All the farmers who have been here a few years are rich; in fact all are getting rich who work for it, yet it has its vagabonds like every city. The people are more moral, refined and highly cultivated, (I mean the better portion) than I expected to find them, very extravagant in dress (especially the ladies,) and furnish their tables luxuriously, but, in my estimation, do not know how to cook it. This of course makes business lively, and business is the order of the day. Milk sells on the street at 15 cts. a quart. Butter 35 to 40 cts. Steak 15 cents, round 10 cts., very nice. Sweet potatees $2,75 to $3.00 per bushel, native growth and much better than any we get in the North. Peaches $2.50 to $3.00 per bushel. I have visited one peach orchard of 1500 trees, and satisfied the demands of nature for one for peaches, besides bringing home with me some 4 or 5 bushels. We got them for a $1,00, a bushel from thet rees; they sold for $2.00, here. I. S. Kallach was announced to lecture here this evening, against female suffrage; but has not come. He nearly made a failure at Manhattan, and report says, had not courage to come here where the majority is against him. Mrs. Cady Stanton, Miss Anthony, and Mrs. Blinkerhoff have lectured here the past week with success. There is great interest here, in regard to another new Rail Road, to run through Texas and Mexico, I believe. Ground is to be broken with much ceremony the 15th of this month. A large packing house has just been put up, and a large number of men have arrived to work in it. Two large machine shops are soon to be located here.

After all I have said in favor of Kansas, I would have you remember that she is in this world, and that on her dark side you will find Fever and Ague, Snakes, Indians, and Whisky Shops.

☞ Capt. Thomas Glover of this city, is building a brig of 269 tons to be called the "Angie Moflit," at Millbridge, to be launched soon. Owners, Messrs. Glover of Rockland, Messrs. Campbell of Cherryfield and C. G. Moflit of this city. Capt. Thomas Glover is to command her.

☞ The Bangor Whig pays our "Dirigo" boys this compliment:—

GOOD SPUNK.—The Rockland firemen have pluck as well as muscle. The Dirigo boys put their machine on a jigger and had it hauled to Bath, a distance of 47 miles, while they chartered stage-coaches for their own transportation. It cost them about $200

THANKSGIVING.

AUGUSTA, ME., Oct. 22.

Governor Chamberlain has appointed Thanksgiving Day in this State the 28th of November.

Any person who, in the course of his daily labor, incurs upon his person, clothing, or dwelling, any spot of paint, oil, grease, stain, smut, or grime of any character soever, will find, in the STEAM REFINED SOAPS, a friend in need. They are embodied antagonism to dirt.

☞ Advices from South America state that the revolution in Peru is assuming serious proportions, the clergy, people and troops generally sympathizing with the revolutionists.

FROM EUROPE

FLORENCE, Oct. 18—Night—The latest despatches received in this city from the Roman territory describe the situation as more serious. Garibaldian volunteer invaders are daily crossing the frontier line and marching to points of insurgent rendezvous, and a great many of the inhabitants, subjects of the Pope and others temporarily resident in the States of the Church, are joining the revolutionary ranks. The insurgent troops have also had successes in the field. They have captured the town of Orte, situated 15 miles east of Viterbo, on the right bank of the Tiber, and hold possession of it. The occupation of Orte by the Garibaldians gives them possession of the railroad at that place and enables them to sever communication between Rome and Florence, which they have done.

PARIS, Oct. 18—Night.—Napoleon and his ministers complain that the efforts made by King Victor Emmanuel and his cabinet for the execution of the terms of the September convention, with respect to the inviolability of the Papal territory from revolutionary invasion are not vigorous, and consequently not effective. Napoleon has decided to defend the Pope with the power of France, and the army and navy of the empire are prepared for action in this direction if required. The Mediterranean squadron has already arrived at Toulon to await orders, and the whole fleet is now ready to sail. Fears are entertained that a collision may take place between the French and Italian forces which are being despatched to Rome, as Paris remains excited and the Italian troops are ready to advance at any moment into the Papal territory or the Eternal City itself.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 21.—The treaty with the United States for the sale of the Russian possessions in North America has been ratified by the Russian government.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—The American squadron, under command of Admiral Farragut, has sailed from Portsmouth for Lisbon.

FLORENCE Oct. 21.—The reports that Garibaldi has disappeared from the Island of Caprera are reiterated and seem to meet with no contradiction.

PARIS, Oct. 21.—No answer has yet been returned by the King of Italy to the ultimatum of the Emperor Napoleon.

FLORENCE, Oct. 21—Night.—The King has summoned Gen. Cialdini to Florence and intrusted to him the formation of a ministry. The people suspect that a new cabinet is being formed in the interest of the French Emperor. Petitions are pouring in from all parts of Italy protesting against the desertion of the national cause by the government.

PARIS, Oct. 21—Night.—Official assurances have been given that the government will not find it necessary to send a military expedition across the Alps, and that the force which had been massed for that purpose will be dissolved. The Bourse, in consequence, is greatly relieved. Rentes buoyant Garibaldi has issued another proclamation, which adds to the prevailing excitement. He exhorts the people of Italy to persevere in the patriotic struggle, and bids them hope that the national honor may yet be redeemed.

PARIS, Oct. 22.—The Moniteur of this morning, in its official article announcing the cessation of war preparations against Italy, says:—"France beheld the spectacle of an invasion of the Papal States by armed bands from the neighboring provinces of Italy. She could not consistently with her duty, her dignity and her national honor, suffer the September convention to be thus violated, so she prepared to send an army across the Alps and a fleet to Rome. But Italy has since given ample pledges to fulfil on her part the obligations of the treaty, in the largest sense, and consequently all hostile preparations have been suspended by France."

FLORENCE, Oct. 22—A. M.—Reports are in circulation that General Garibaldi has not only eluded the vigilance of the government in making his escape from Caprera, but has succeeded in reaching Italy, and is now with his son Menotti.

Popular agitation is very great from one end of Italy to the other. An extremely bitter feeling is shown against France, while the government of the King is loaded with reproaches by the people for yielding to the dictation of Napoleon. There have been several demonstrations of indignation in Florence. The populace gather in great crowds beneath the windows of the government offices and shout for Rome as the capitol of Italy.

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 22.—A telegram received from Marseilles to-day reports the wreck of the American brig Imogene, Capt. Baker, which sailed from New York on the 27th of July, for Cette, France. The brig went ashore during a heavy gale near Sevignon, and will probably be a total loss. The captain and crew were saved.

CHOLERA IN PHILADELPHIA

OUTBREAK ON A RECEIVING SHIP.

The Disease of a Malignant Type.

PHILADELPHIA, OCT. 22, 1867.

Twenty-two cases of genuine Asiatic cholera are reported in this city to-day. The outbreak of the disease occurred on Saturday the 19th instant, on board the receiving ship Potomac, which is now lying off the Navy Yard here. The Potomac is a third rate frigate of twenty-four guns and 1726 tons, old measurement which has been in service as a receiving ship at the port of Pensacola for several months. About four months ago she was tranferred to this port, and it is thought she may have become infected with the seeds of disease by remaining so long in southern waters. It is singular, it such has been the case, that there should have been no symptoms of the pestilence until the present time.

In the majority of the fatal cases, death ensued within a few hours after the first attack, the sufferers being taken with diarrhœa, cramps, vomiting, and all the known symptoms of Asiatic cholera. The disease is described by the physicians as exhibiting a very bad type, yielding very slowly to the best known methods of treatment. On Sunday all hands on board the infected ship who had not exhibited symptoms of the disease were removed to the Constellation and the Florida, which are anchored near by, and the Potomac was at once placed under hospital regulations; but this did not avail, as several were soon attacked and had to be transferred to their old quarters. No one except the physicians and nurses and those whose presence is required, is permitted to visit the vessel. Bost. Adv.

FIRES.

PORTLAND, Oct. 20.—The Grand Trunk Railroad bridge at Starke N. H., was destroyed by fire yesterday. It will be in order for trains to pass to-morrow.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 20.—A fire occurred this morning in the Green Mount Water Cure establishment, about two miles from the city of Richmond, Indiana. Loss fully covered by insurance.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 20.—A fire broke out this afternoon in the bakery and confectionery establishment of Mr. Pethooff on Biddle street, between 15th and 16th streets. One or two buildings adjoining were damaged. Loss about $10,000; insured $6000.

The extensive row of buildings on the corner of Carr and Collins streets, known as Randall's stables, were burned last night, together with 7 horses, 2 mules, several wagons and a lot of household furniture. Loss about $15,000; insurance $4000.

☞ The election in Virginia, on Tuesday, passed off more quietly than was anticipated. The result is yet doubtful, but where the returns are completed they generally give a majority to radical candidates. The whites generally voted the conservative ticket.

Items: Home-Made and Stolen.

☞ Out of a total of twenty-six members of the New Orleans military band, twenty-four have had the yellow fever and nine have died.

☞ The total value of the porgy fishery in Maine this year is only $2,400,000, an amount very much below that of last year.

☞ Pennsylvania by full official returns gave Sharswood 268,026 votes and Williams 266,824.

☞ A pine lumber raft, from the Wisconsin pineries, covering three acres of surface, floated down the Mississippi the other day.

☞ A Pittsfield pastor astonished his audience last Sunday by remarking that most of his people were asleep,—part of them in the house of God, and the rest at home.

☞ Lewiston, Maine, claims a population of 12,000, or an increase of sixty-six per cent. in seven years.

☞ The Portland Argus says that a young man not far from Portland was attending his sick father (who was a rigid Baptist), and while rubbing his father's back, their pastor, who was present, asked the son if he was not bathing too hard. "No, sir," the son replied, "he is a hard shell Baptist."

☞ "Vitals cooked here," is the appalling announcement placarded in the window of a New York eating house. That is probably where the good "livers" all go.

SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILL.

A certain Cure for Diseased Liver and the many Dangerous Maladies which are caused by a morbid condition of that organ.

TO give the public a clear understanding of the mode in which SCHENCK'S Mandrake Pills produce those wonderful effects which are attested by thousands of reliable witnesses, we present a brief and its functions, which will make the operation of this popular medicine perceptible to every man's understanding.

The liver is supplied with blood vessels, nerves and absorbents. Also of its ducts tube is to secrete and prepare the bile. It likewise filters the blood and separates that fluid from all impurities. How indispensably necessary to health is the proper performance of this function! If the liver is diseased, it cannot purify the blood, and if that is sent back through the lungs, brain, and other parts in a morbid condition, it must cause jaundice, biliousness, obstruction of the kidneys, gravel, and many other complaints more or less painful and dangerous, but the least of them quite enough to make a man sick and uncomfortable, and unfit for the performance of any of the duties of life. This unhealthy state of the system very often ends in pulmonary consumption.

The circulation of the blood is conducted in this manner: The heart sends the vital current down through the arteries; it passes through the flesh, taking up all impurities in its progress, then the return of blood flows backward through the veins, and passes to the liver to be purified. It is impossible to cure consumption, scrofula, or scarcely any other kind of ulceration, while that important organ, the liver, is diseased. It is for that reason that "regular physicians" rarely cure consumption. They usually begin their treatment with the use of some cough medicine, the basis of which is morphia or opium in some shape, which locks up the liver instead of relaxing the secretions, giving a tone to the stomach, and producing a healthy flow of bile. Dr. Schenck's will strengthen the system, purify the blood, and ripen and heal ulcers on the lungs.

A volume would be required, to give a brief account of the remarkable cures performed by Dr. Schenck's medicines, viz., Pulmonic Syrup, Seaweed Tonic, and Mandrake Pills, all of which are accompanied by full directions for the use of them.

DR. SCHENCK will be professionally at his rooms every week, 32 Bond Street, New York, and 25 Hanover Street, Boston, from 9 A. M. until 2 P. M. He gives advice free; but for a thorough examination with the Respirometer the charge is five (5) dollars. His medicines are for sale by all druggists and dealers. Also a full supply at all times at his rooms. Price of the Pulmonic Syrup and Seaweed Tonic, each $1.50 per bottle, or $7.50 the half dozen. Mandrake Pills 25 cents per box.

Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry.

Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, Quinsy, and the numerous as well as dangerous diseases of the Throat, Chest and Lungs, prevail in our changeable climate at all seasons of the year; few are fortunate enough to escape their baneful influence. How important then to have it at hand a certain antidote to all these complaints. Experience proves that this exists in Wistar's Balsam to an extent not found in any other remedy; however severe the suffering, the application of this soothing, healing and wonderful Balsam at once vanquishes the disease and restores the sufferer to wanted health.

FROM GEORGE W. MILLETT, Esq.,

Formerly Editor of the Advertiser, Norway, Me.

"For a remedy of such undoubted merit as DR. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY, I cheerfully give you my testimony, and trust that others may be induced thereby to give it a trial and be relieved.—Several years since I first became acquainted with this Balsam, at a time of a distressing cough and cold, which took such firm hold of my lungs as to render me unfit for business; and its operation produced a speedy and permanent cure, after trying various remedies to no avail.

In our town this remedy is a great favorite with many, and if all who suffer will but give it a fair trial, I think they will find it to be of more service in pulmonary affections than any other remedy of this class before the public."

Prepared by SETH W. FOWLE & SON, 18 Tremont St., Boston, and for sale by Druggists generally.

Peerless Cooking Stove

THE ONLY COOKING STOVE AMONG HUNDREDS OF

COMPETITORS

That was awarded a MEDAL at the great

PARIS EXPOSITION.

THIS Stove is in all respects fully equal, and in some particulars greatly superior to any Cooking Stove heretofore offered to the public, embracing, as it does, all the advantages of the best stoves in use, together with some entirely new and very desirable features, by which the faults or defects known to exist in all other cooking stoves are in this stove remedied.

By a new and patented method of introducing hot air into the Oven, the following valuable results are obtained.

1st. An equal Temperature in all parts of the Oven, so that no article while baking or roasting requires to be changed or turned.

2d. A great saving in amount of fuel required in Baking.

3d. Complete ventilation of the Oven; a current of heated air constantly passing through it.

4th. A new method of conveying air upon the fire consuming the gases and making a gas-burner of practical utility.

No dust can escape while shaking or dumping the Grate, and the arrangement of the Ash Pan is very simple, and works admirably.

The fire can be perfectly controlled and kept through an entire season without rekindling.

It has a new regulator for controlling the draft.

It has a large Oven, and is a quick baker.

It works equally well for coal or wood.

Every Stove is made of the best quality, pure Pig Iron, and warranted not to crack.

It is mounted in the best manner, and for beauty of design and smoothness of castings cannot be surpassed.

In all the requisites of a first-class Cook Stove, the Peerless, as its name indicates has no equal in the market. For sale by

LOOK, LADIES, LOOK,

And See what you will See.

THAT the subscriber begs leave to inform the Ladies and Misses of Rockland and all surrounding towns, that as Bronze work is to be the Style for this Fall and winter and as every Lady and Miss will want their Bonnets and Hats, Flowers and wreaths bronzed they can have them done in all shades from a Gold bronze to a dark Brown bronze, and also in a Silver bronze by bringing them or sending them to the Bonnet Bleachery or leaving them at the Millinery.

It does not make any difference what kind of Straw it is that you want bronzed or what Color it is, as I can bronze a Black Hat or Bonnet, just as well as I can a white one, and again if you have any flowers or wreaths that are soiled or a little out of style they can by a slight alteration be bronzed to look just as well as the new ones.

No bonnet or hat has to be bleached or colored that is to be bronzed, therefore, you will all see that there is a great saving of time and expense. And as there will be a grand rush for this kind of work, you had better bring or send in your work as early as possible, as it is the prettiest and most stylish thing that has ever been got up. Samples on all kinds of Straw and in all shades can be seen at the Bonnet Bleachery. Please call and examine the samples and decide for yourselves.

STARRETT'S

PATENT

Meat and Vegetable Chopper.

A GREATLY NEEDED AND SUCCESSFUL INVENTION.

THIS is the most simple, durable and effective machine of the kind ever invented; is perfect in construction and in its operation; strong, and not liable to get out of repair, and so easily worked that a child can chop more meat with it in half an hour, and do it better, than a woman can with the hand-chopper and tray in a whole day. It does not grind the meat, leaving it stringy, but cuts clean and nice. It is of use through the entire year, as it is adapted to cutting Sausage and Mince Meat, Hash, Fish, Apples, all kinds of esculents and every article of food which requires chopping. It everywhere meets with universal favor, and has already become an indispensible article in many families, boarding-houses, hotels, restaurants, bakeries, butcher-shops, in the New England and Middle States. It occupies no more room than a common chopping tray, and is as easily cleaned. Increasing orders for them are coming in from every quarter.

A practical test of their merits is the only recommendation needed, but for the benefit of those who have not yet had the opportunity of trying them, we will add a few of the many flattering testimonials in their favor, that are freely given to J. TAYLOR & Co.

PORTLAND, July 5th, 1867.

We, the undersigned, citizens of Portland, having a short time since purchased Starrett's patent Meat and Vegetable Choppers, and having used them in our several families, Hotels and Shops, find they do all the Patentee claims for them, and we would not do without them for five times the cost, if we could not get other machines like them. Awarded for FAMILY SEWING MACHINES, JULY 1, 1867.

WEED SEWING MACHINE,

We have succeeded, after YEARS OF LABOR AND EXPENSE, in producing a labor-saving Machine in every sense of the term. We shall not try, here, to enumerate the many advantages we have gained over other Machines, but simply ask you to call and examine them. The great beauty of them is their simplicity. They are adapted to the most extreme range of work, and have no crooked needle, to skip stitches on fine work, or BREAK when you wish to run over a seam, but go right along, over thick and thin, just as though they had brains, and knew exactly what you wanted of them. Their working parts are made of hardened steel, and will run for many years without repairs. We could fill sheets with Testimonials of their intrinsic value, but it pleases us much more to have people call at our Store and see, and KNOW the facts.

Yours Respectfully,

Manhood: How Lost, How Restored

Just published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure (without medicine) of SPERMATORRHŒA, or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency to Marriage, etc.; also CONSUMPTION EPILEPSY and FITS, induced by self-indulgence or sexual extravagance.

☞ Price, in a sealed envelope, only six cents.

The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife—pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

☞ This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address postpaid, on receipt of six cents, or two post stamps. Also, Dr. Culverwell's "Marriage Guide," price 25 cents. Address the publishers,

Paris Exposition.

GOLD MEDAL.

AN ADMITTED FACT.

It is admitted by all that ELIAS HOWE, JR., President of The Howe Machine Co., was awarded a GOLD MEDAL at the Paris Exposition.

Also, it is admitted that the Grand Cross of the Legion of Honor was conferred upon ELIAS HOWE, JR., by the Emperor Napoleon. These were the HIGHEST HONORS ever awarded to a Sewing Machine Manufacturer.

THE ONLY QUESTION,

For what did ELIAS HOWE, Jr., receive these honors? He entered the Exposition as a MANUFACTURER of Sewing Machines, not as "Inventor."

He did not apply for or receive his Gold Medal as "Inventor."

The AWARD speaks of Mr. HOWE as "Promoter" and "MANUFACTURER" of Sewing Machines.

Mr. HOWE (who is supposed to know) says the GOLD MEDAL was awarded to him for his Sewing Machines exhibited, AND FOR NOTHING ELSE.

Now in all fairness we ask, Whose Sewing Machines took the FIRST PRIZE at the Exposition?

Let COMMON SENSE ANSWER, and we are content.
